

CORC Central Team

The CORC Central Team has a wide variety of skills and professional experiences which help them in supporting CORC members. Within the team we have knowledge of how CAMH services operate, clinical needs, involving service users. If you are not sure who is best able to deal with your query, please email us at corc@annafreud.org and we will forward your query on.

Dr Miranda Wolpert, Director

Dr Miranda Wolpert currently heads up the CAMHS Evidence Based Practice Unit (EBPU) at University College London, A Consultant Child Psychologist with many years experience in Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS). Miranda works 1.5 days a week for CORC. Her role is to oversee the direction and development of this learning collaboration, to provide information on national policy and a strategic overview.

Emma Trustam, CORC Research Coordinator

Emma's role in CORC involves taking the lead in coordinating the CORC Research project, which primarily entails overseeing all aspects of the project; prioritising and managing the existing workload as well as new initiatives within the project. Emma is a Chartered Occupational Psychologist and formerly worked for the Centre of Policing Excellence. In her previous job she designed and developed assessment and selection systems for recruitment and promotions within the police force, as well as evaluating assessment centre performance; service evaluation, and training programs using quantitative methods with some content analysis.

Jenna Bradley, Research Assistant Psychologist

Jenna's role in CORC is to work alongside other members of the central team in supporting members in rising to the challenge of implementing routine outcome evaluation in their services. Jenna joined CORC in the full-time post of Research Assistant Psychologist in December 2007. Jenna graduated from Buckinghamshire Chilterns in 2005 with a BSc (Hons) Psychology. Since graduating, Jenna has been working in the private sector involved in staff reward schemes and personnel management. Jenna's particular interest lies in Educational Psychology.

Halina Flannery, Research Assistant Psychologist

Halina's role in CORC is to work alongside the central team, providing support to members and producing service reports. Halina joined CORC in the full-time post of Assistant Research Psychologist in July 2009. She completed her Psychology BSc degree in 2007 and has since been working at Lansons Communications, a PR agency, where she co-coordinated a psychological research project with Southampton University. She is excited about moving to a career in Psychology.

Claire Smith, Research Assistant Psychologist

Claire's role in CORC is to work alongside the central team, providing support to members and producing service reports. Claire joined CORC in the full-time post of Assistant Research Psychologist in June 2009. She has an MSc in Applied Neuropsychology and comes to us from the Research, Analysis and International department at Ofsted, where she was involved in introducing a risk assessment model into the school inspection selection process.

Slavi Savic, CORC Administrator

Slavi joined the CAMHS EBPU and CORC teams in October 2009. Slavi has extensive experience in planning and managing deliverables on research programmes. Previously she worked with the LSE Complexity Group and LSE London Multimedia Lab, co-coordinating the research work. Her work with groups and individuals supports her interest in social and cultural issues and creative relationships, further building on her MA in Existential Psychotherapy from the University of Sheffield. Within the LML, she has contributed to the creative media outputs of the research project Images and Sounds. Her wider interests and skills include photography and photographic manipulation, graphic design and web design, video editing, creating video shorts and multimedia art.
